Just within a few minutes of their departure, the fever appeared to rise very high and a terrible shivering carne on me, and cold. In the meantime the Doctor arrived; the thermometer indicated that the fever was already as high as 107°. They got me down at once, from my hand-cuffs and placed me in a cell nearby. There I fell nearly unconscious and began to get very severe spasms also, followed by the lock-jaws. The Doctor then found it necessary to keep me constantly before his very eyes, so that he might carefully watch the symptoms as they showed themselves, and ordered my removal to hospital accordingly.

I had accordingly to be carried, by about half a dozen men, on their shoulders, and I remember what trouble it was, to those men, that had to carry me as a load, so many stories down first, and then so many stories up again, to the hospital ward, while I was getting such awful fits of spasms on the way. However, they managed somehow, and with great difficulty, to drop me down on a bed, where the Medical Superintendent examined me and gave injection first. Later on, I remember, they gave me a very severe battery charge, the effects
